traditions create strangers and neighbors? How do they construct otherness? Or, instead, work to overcome it? In this exciting collection of interdisciplinary essays, scholars and activists from various traditions explore these questions. Through legal and media studies, they reveal how we see religious others. They show that Jewish, Christian, Islamic, and Sikh texts frame others in open-ended ways. Conflict resolution experts and Hindu teachers, they explain, draw on a shared positive psychology. Jewish mystics and Christian

Islamic seminaries or madrasas received
much media attention
in India, mostly owing to the alleged link
between madrasa
education and forms of violence. Yet, while ample information on madrasas for boys is available, similar institutions of Islamic learning for girls have

for the greater part
escaped public attention so far. This study investigates
how madrasas for
girls emerged in India,
how they differ from
madrasas for boys,
and how female
students come to interpret Islam
through the teachings
they receive in these schools. Observations

suggest that, next to the official curriculum, the 'informal' curriculum plays an equally important role. It serves the madrasa's broader aim of bringing about a complete reform of the students' morality and to determine their actions accordingly. This title can be previewed in Google
